KACHIC AND WATSON

Claim they are Innocent of the Crime.

BOTH MEN CHEERFUL

Feel Confident they will be set Free After the Habeas Corpus Hearing on Saturday.

LOVE, TAYLOR AND SPANGLER ATT'Y

On Friday night great excitement prevailed in the town when the news became current that two men accused of one of the murders committed near Bellefonte recently would be brought here on one of the evening trains. Great crowds flocked to the 8:16 but were disappointed. They then went into the Central depot and sure enough when the train arrived Constable S. R. McCartney of Snow Shoe, and two detectives employed by the county stepped off the cars with two men. They were taken immediately to the county jail.

On Friday morning District Attorney William Runkle of Bellefonte and L. Mallard and Harry Bower of the Standard Detective Agency of Philadelphia left on the 9 o'clock train for Snow Shoe they were met there by John Decker of the same detective agency and S. R. McCartney Constable of Snow Shoe township.

A few moments of consultation was held and the five men separated. It was just 1.30 when Constable McCartney entered the Kachic home and placed Andrew A. Kachic under arrest, accused of murdering his cousin John Kachic on the evening of September 12, 1906 Kachic is a man about 42 years of age, he has a wife and four children and an old broken hearted mother who has passed her 85th year. It is reported from good authority that Kachic was on bad terms with his cousin and threatened several times to kill him.

At 4 o'clock McCartney entered the Kelley mine and placed Harry Watson under arrest accused of assisting in the same crime. Watson is a man about 48 years old, he has a wife and seven little bright eyed children who clung to their father with tears streaming down their faces when they bid him farewell. Watson's father is living and is quite an old man, he is a highly respected citizen of that vicinity.

Both Kachic and Watson proclaim they are innocent of the crime and say they will prove their innocence at the trial. The evidence against them is very very strong and the District Attorney feels confident he has the right parties.

STORY PRINTED AT TIME OF THE MURDER.

Wednesday morning about 5:30 o'clock several miners, in the Snow Shoe coal region, were on their way to work, and while passing the railroad station at Clarence, made a gruesome find--That of the body of a man lying along the track of the New York Central. His head and one arm were entirely severed from the body, and they lay in pieces along the track, so that his identification was simply impossible at that time. The men who made the frightful discovery at once made it known, and it was not long before a large crowd assembled on the scene. In the crowd was George Kachic, proprietor of the hotel at Clarence, who after viewing the mangled form, identified it as his cousin John Kachic, who was about 38 years of age. At first the general impression was that a cold blooded murder has been committed and his fellow countrymen became greatly excited over the awful occurrence. After the excitement had subsided the remains were gathered up and taken in charge by an order, to which the deceased belonged. It has since become a question as to whether he was murdered, or whether he was struck by a train sometime Tuesday.

Tuesday evening, about 8 o'clock he was at the hotel at Clarence conversing with Andrew K. Kachic a brother of the proprietor of the hotel and a cousin of the murdered man, and Harry Watson, better known up around Snow Shoe as "Pack" Watson, but they know nothing about his where abouts, after he left for home, which is located only a short distance from the hotel. The deceased was married and is survived by a wife and three sons, the oldest being 16 years of age.

LATER.

In above article we mentioned the fact of the finding of the dead body of John Kachic on the railroad track at Clarence. Workmen going to work on the morning of September 12 found the horribly mutilated body of a man who proved to be Kachic lying along the New York Central tracks. It was identified by George Kachic, proprietor of the Clarence hotel as his cousin. The head and one arm was found some distance away from the body.

At first it was thought to have been an accidental death but later developments prove a different story. On Friday Coroner P. S Elsher and District Attorney W. G. Runkle went to Snow Shoe and instituted an investigation. A jury was empanelled and an inquest and post-mortem examination held. It revealed the fact that the unfortunate man had been murdered before being placed on the track. His body was placed on the railroad to disguise the means of his death.

The man was last seen on Tuesday night about 8 o'clock at the hotel in Clarence. Murder was plainly shown by several stilleto thrusts in the neck, one of which almost severed the juglar vein. Doctors say the man was dead when placed on the railroad track.

THE PRISONERS STORY.

Surrounded by the grim prison walls, in a small cell bound with steel, are two prisoners, Andrew K. Kachic and Harry Watson, who proclaim to the world they are innocent of the crime for which they are accused. If innocent and standing accused as they are the suspense these men are passing through must be almost unbearable. The habeas corpus hearing on Saturday afternoon will decide as to whether they shall remain behind the prison bars or go free into the world.

It is hard for either of them to give a clear account of their whereabouts on the afternoon and evening before the murder of John Kachic, as the whole lot of them had been drinking. They remember being at Mr. George Kachic's saloon until late that evening. John Kachic the murdered man was with them and they were all having a royal good time and when they separated it was with the best of feeling toward one another. John Kachic either left the saloon before or after Watson and Andrew Kachic, neither one of them can remember of seeing him start for home. Watson went with Kachic to his home to stay all night, as the two had planned to go over to one of the mines to hunt work the next day. They were accompanied to Kachic's house by Thomas Meegan who lives a short distance beyond the Kachic's. They both say they were shocked when they heard the news of John Kachic's death. Andrew says he never made any threats against his cousins life, that they only quarrelled once and afterwards became the best of friends again. He says that John Kachic had a great many bad friends over around Cato as John was an non-union man and worked during all the coal strike.

Watson is cheerful and feels sure he will be vindicated at the hearing Saturday and Kachic feels the same way, he seems a little more downhearted than Watson, perhaps that is his disposition and then this accusation no doubt is weighing heavily on his mind.

He says "By the Holy Saints above I did not kill my cousin,"

Andrew Kachic is 41 years old and this is the first time he was ever in prison and the first time he was ever accused of any crime. He served three years in the Slavish Army and has an honorable discharg from the same. He is a citizen now of the United States, having been naturalized August 25, 1897. He has been in this country 19 years. He belongs to several Slavish organizations known as the N. A. R. Slov Spol of the U. S. of America and wears a cross with this inscription on I. K. S. J.

HUGH S. TAYLOR ELECTED

Is Now Colonel of the Fighting 5th--Succeeds Rufus C. Elder of Lewistown

HE HAD NO OPPOSITION

Captain George W Crede Co. D. of Blairsville Elected Lieut. Colonel on the 20th Ballot

ROBERT HUNTER APPOINTED ADJUTANT

The line officers of the Fifth regiment, National Guard of Pennsylvania, held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the Logan house parlors, the object being the election of a colonel of the regiment vice Colonel Rufus Elder, of Lewistown, resigned. There was a good attendance. The election of a colonel was an easy matter, but to fill the office of lieutenant colonel required twenty ballots.

The election was conducted by Colonel W. E. Thompson, of the 14th regiment, Pittsburg. Captain F. W. Fee, of company F, Indiana, nominated Lieutenant Colonel Hugh Stewart Taylor, of Bellefonte, for the vacant colonelcy. The election was made unanimous and the ballot was cast by Captain George B, Corbin, of company A, of Huntingdon.

The question of electing a lieutenant colonel then came up. Major M. A. Miller, of Hollidaysburg, was nominated by Captain James A. Woleslagle, of company C; Major John C. Dunkle, of Huntingdon, was named by Captain Corbin; Captain David M. Caldwell, regimental quartermaster, was named by Captain Fee, and Captain George W. Crede, of company D, Blairsville, by Captain W. P. Maclay, of company E. The contest was long drawn out. Twenty ballots were taken and on the last Captain Crede was successful. He is senior captain of the regiment.

An election for a captain of company D, will take place later.

The election of Col. Taylor is a deserved promotion, as there is not a man in the entire National Guard who has served the State with more fidelity than Col. Taylor. He joined the Guard as a private about twenty years ago when he enlisted in company B and has come up from the ranks through every degree of non commissioned and commissioned officer to that of his present rank.

We feel confident that the regiment will now advance to the head of the National Guards. Heretofore they were near the tail end, although Co. B, as a company always stood in the lead, now the "Fighting 5th" with Taylor at the head will be seen in that place.

Col. Taylor's election of course brings the headquarters of the regiment to Bellefonte, and will also result in almost an entirely new colonel's staff.

Though the colonel has not yet completed his list of appointments he has decided on some and, naturally, a number of Bellefonters will be given honors. Both Dr. M. J. Locke and Dr. R. G. H. Hayes will be retained on the staff, the former as commissary captain and the latter as major surgeon. Robert F. Hunter has been appointed adjutant, Claude Smith sergeant major and Harry J. Jackson regimental clerk.

It is also the purpose of the colonel to organize a bugle corps of sixteen men, twelve fifers and four drummers, and this will be located at Milesburg with Toner A. Hugg in charge. A bugle corps will be a new thing for the Fifth regiment as it has never had one before. Of course the Fifth regiment band, of Clearfield will also be retained on the roll.

Colonel Hugh Stewart Taylor.

Grant Piper Dead.

The sad news reached Bellefonte that Grant Pifer died at his home in Wilkinsburg, Monday of heart disease.

Mr. Pifer was well known in our town, having been born at Howard and for some years was in the grocery business with his brother-in-law T. A. Smith in Bellefonte, afterwards going to Wilkinsburg where he has been clerking for the transfer department of the Pennsylvania R. R. Mr. Pifer was married to Anna Hoy, daughter of H. K. Hoy whose farm is south of Bellefonte, to this union was born several children, two of which are living.

He was a member of the German Reform church and always lived a good clean life in that faith. The funeral of Mr. Pifer was held in Bellefonte, this afternoon.

Smith—Kelley.

On Tuesday evening Miss Annie Kelley one of the young ladies employed at the Bush House became the wife of Mr. Maurice Smith, a carriage finisher and decorator at the McQuistian works. The young people were united in marriage by Squire Jacob Keller at the home of the groom at Pine Grove Mills.

Miss Edna Thomas was the bridesmaid and Mr. George Miller acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on the 4:44 train on a bridal tour throughout Pennsylvania.

The San Juan Star.

John J. Bayard a former Bellefonte boy who has been on the Pacific coast the past six years and for five years connected with the Oakland Tribune has launched into the newspaper business on his own book. The name of his paper is called "The San Juan Star." John is a son of the late Colonel George A. Bayard, of Bellefonte. A clipping from a large paper in Oakland, Cal, has this to say in regards to John's new venture.

"San Juan is to have another paper. J. J. Bayard is the promoter of the new journal. Mr. Bayard was formerly connected with the Oakland Tribune, in the advertising department, and is thoroughly conversant with the ins and outs of the newspaper business. As there always seems to be room for another in the newspaper world, Mr. Bayard will no doubt make a success of his undertaking.

Read This and Beware.

Little Lizzie Kochenour, aged 14 years, died at Harrisburg, this week as the result of a cruel joke. Over a year ago she took part in an entertainment at Sunday school, and when she had finished her part, was about to sit down when somebody pulled the chair from under her, and she fell heavily. Dropsy developed from the injury, 20 quarts of water were found in the body after death, and an abscess near the spinal cord.

INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS

Of Gregg Post No. 95 on Saturday Evening at Eight O'clock.

SUPPER WAS SERVED

Many Prominent Speakers Present—The Camp Fire was an Entertaining Feature—Many Pine Knots Burnt.

GENERAL GREEN INSTALLING OFFICER.

Mingled with joy and sadness the old boys in blue met in the Gregg Post rooms on Saturday night and held their annual installation.

We say joy and sadness because their is always a bright sunny side to a soldiers life and then the sorrows were many. They were all happy and joyous on this occassion and told only of the funny things that happened during those dark dismal days when they all fought for the "grand old flag." It is very true that these same men will never assemble again as they did Saturday night, for before another year passes around some one will have answered to that last roll call. These men who went forth at the call in 60 in the glory and strength and beauty of youth and manhood are today bent with age, and deserve the praise and honor of every true American citizen. All honor and glory to the living and to those who have passed beyond let us strew their graves amid tears with flowers and let us not forget that in every age the Master of Life and Death, who is kinder as well as wiser than we, has transplanted to Heaven in their springtime Death's sweetest flowers and there they may rise on stepping stones of their own dead selves to higher things.

Death Cometh to every man sooner or later, but death on the battlefield to the hero is a more glorious death than any other. Even in his dying moments it comforts him to know "his sword has won the battle for the free" and that "the thanks of millions yet to be" are his and so well content, he rests with the "storied brave."

And so the occasion Saturday night brought back old memories of by-gone days and from among it all the boys gathered the brightest parts to related The evening was one of the most interesting and joyous in the history of the Post.

At five o'clock the ladies of the post announced that supper was ready. The large tables were loaded with good things to eat such as chicken and waffles, cold ham, rolls, mixed pickles, bread and butter, honey, tea, cocoa, coffee, ice cream, cake, and fruit. It was certainly surprising how these delicacies disappeared when the boys once got started. The ladies deserve the greatest praise and hearty thanks for this bountiful repast. After supper cigars were handed around and an hour of good sociability existed.

A short session of the Post was held after which the installation took place. General William Green Inspector of Department of Pennsylvania of the Grand Army of the Republic was present to conduct the ceremonies.

General Green is a soldier in every respect of the word, he is commanding and courteous and has a loud clear and distinct voice and the manner in which he conducted the installation is deserving of commendation. The members of the Post installed to the different offices were as follows.

Commander—Harry B. Pontius
Sr. Vice Commander—Isaac Thomas
Jr. Vice Commander—Joseph Alters
Surgeon—John H. Bryan
Office of the Day—John I. Curtin
Quarter Master—William H. Musser
Officer of the Guard—William Flack
Chaplain—James H. Harris
Patriotic Instructor—Samuel Miller
Sergeant Major—Monroe Miller
Quarter Master Sergeant—S. B. Miller

After the Installation the "Camp Fire" was lit. Colonel Austin Curtin was chosen chairman. He called upon General Green as the first speaker who responded in a very eloquent manner. The other speakers were Colonel Jackson L. Spangler, Rev. James Stine of the Methodist church, James H. Harris, General John I. Curtin, W. H. Musser, Colonel Emanuel Noll, David F. Fortney Esq., Clement Dale Esq., and Francis Speer. The camp fire was put out and the evening services closed.

FORMERLY OF BELLEFONTE

Miss Elizabeth Gummo Sues Edgar Toner for Breach of Promise.

Tuesday's North American contained an account of which follows of a breach of promise suit field in the Blair county court by Miss Elizabeth Gummo, formerly of Bellefonte, against Edgar Toner a prominent citizen of Tyrone.

Pursuant to an order of the court, H. Price Graffius, attorney for Miss Elizabeth Gummo filed in court the love letters that will figure prominently in the breach of promise suit instituted by Miss Gummo against Edgar G. Toner, a prominent citizen and Councilman, of Tyrone, wherein $25,000 damages are claimed.

Both of the litigants are prominent socially in Tyrone higher society, and the defendant is reputed very wealthy.

The letters are replete with endearing terms, and the writer shows great solicitude for Miss Gummo's welfare. One, written to the plaintiff while she was stopping at Atlantic City, entreats her to stay away from the Inlet, for fear something may happen to her. Several of the letters are signed "Your fat old pudding," which, Attorney Graffius will endeavor to prove to a jury, evidenced the most intimate relations between Toner and Miss Gummo.

The letters extended over a period of several years, and the plaintiff will endeavor to show that the relations between her and Toner were such as would exist only between persons whose relations were most intimate and confidential.

In her statement, Miss Gummo declares that Toner in a fit of ardent admiration, bit her, the wound thus inflicted producing a cancer, which has injured her permanently, and for this she demands damages in the sum of $10,000.

Miss Gummo, the plaintiff, has filed in the Blair County Court, a large number of endearing letters, which, she alleges were written to her by the defendant, Edgar C. Toner, and in which she bases her claim for damages. Both principals are prominent in Tyrone social circles, the defendant being reputed wealthy and a member of the municipal council.

He was conveyed to his bed but died a few moments afterwards. The cause of death was due to heart disease. Mr. McCormick figured prominently in the county state and national politics. He was a life long Republican and was born and raised in Clinton Co. For 20 years he held the position of City Solicitor of Lock Haven. He was 60 years of age.

The Little Black Dress

By Louise Woodward.

Miss Wells was by far the best liked teacher at the Walden Seminary for Young Ladies. She was tall and slight, with dark hair and soft brown eyes. She was quite pale, but always dressed in black.

One evening she was in her room with one of her favorite pupils. Elsie Redmond by name.

Nothing had been said for some time until Elsie broke the silence, saying: 'I know I have no right and perhaps I seem rude to you, but nevertheless I am going to ask you why it is anyone so lively, jolly and pretty as you should always dress in black."

"Dear Elsie," the teacher said, fondly patting her head, "you have been such a dear since I came here that I have learned to love you very much, but not quite yet can I tell you; some time I will, but please do not ask to-night. You must think I am a peculiar old maid, but some time you will understand."

The class were having recitation one day, when the door opened and the maid announced that a gentleman was waiting in the library to see Miss Wells.

Nothing was heard from her until as Elsie was going to her room that night Miss Wells called her into her room. Drawing Elsie down beside her on the couch she said: 'I am going to tell you something about my earlier life and why I always wear black,

"My mother died when I was 14 year old my father when I was 4, an being an only child, naturally I was allowed to do just about as I pleased. Mother left as my guardian her only sister, Betty, a woman about 40 years old.

"She was always scolding me for the amount of washing and mending she had to do, until one day she said that she would make me nothing but black dresses which I should wear everywhere except to church.

"Once May day, when I was 17, at which age I was old enough to choose for myself what I should wear, we were going to have a festival in the village and I wanted to wear a pretty pink dress that I had but Aunt Betty had just finished a black muslin, which she insisted I should wear, for she said I had got the white one I wore the last time all grass stains. I said if I could not wear the pink one I should not go, and she said in a very sweet way to stay at home then, and I was just stubborn enough to do so.

"I had promised to go to the dance with a young man whom I liked very much, Stanley Prescott.

"That afternoon when he came for me I would not go downstairs, and so Aunt Betty went to the door and told him something, the substance of which I have never found out; but the next day a letter came from him, saying that he had suddenly decided to accept a position to go to Australia with a gentleman who was making a geological study of that country staring that morning.

"You can imagine my anger when I realized that he had gone. I remember it as plain as if it were yesterday. I was beside myself. I ran downstairs to my aunt and demanded that she tell me what she had said, but she would not. After a fierce battle of words, I made a vow that I should leave her house that very day and neither enter it nor speak to her again, also that I should always dress in black until I should see or hear from Stanley again.

"That night I left her and began studying for the position I now hold, which I got through some friends. Foolish though it may seem, Elsie have never broken my strange vows of that night.

"I have heard nothing from Stanley until today. It was he that called me from the schoolroom this afternoon, He has lain at death's door for months, away from all his friends, with a terrible fever, and now he looks so thin and old, but he has come at last to take me with him to care for him until he has health back, and then we are going back to go on with his researches and I shall help him write a book on his studies.

"The first people he saw on reaching New York were the friends who got me this position, and in this way he found me.

"We shall leave here a week from today, but I shall always remember you, dear, and you must never forget me."

Funeral of Philip B. Crider.

The funeral services of the late Philip B. Crider occurred this morning at the home of his son F. W. Crider on Linn street. Reverend James B. Stine, of the Methodist Episcopal church conducted the services. The singing was very pretty and impressive. The casket bearers were chosen from among the employees of the planing mill and were as follows: Messrs George Blue, Oscar Wetzel, James Rine, William Hill, Thaddeus Hamilton and Patrick Garriety. The employees of the mill sent as a token of respect and esteem a very beautiful floral design. At 1:23 the body was taken to Lock Haven for interment which was made in the Highland cemetery.

CURFEW ASKED FOR.

By the Mothers Club's of Jersey Shore Shore and Lock Haven.

The borough Councils of Lock Haven and Jersey Shore have been importuned to pass a curfew ordinance. The Mothers Clubs of these towns have a membership of 150 members they have appointed a committee and engaged an attorney to press the matter. The request read as follows.

GENTLEMEN: Whereas the morals of our boys and girls is a matter of supreme importance to good citizenship, to the families of which they are a part, and most particularly to their own future wellfare and happiness.

And whereas we are of the opinion that many boys and girls of naturally good impulses are debauched and ruined for life on account of the evil associates of the streets under the shadows of night when and where these youths are now permitted to loiter about, unrestrict and unprotected by parental oversight.

And whereas we believe that the perils surrounding these children can be greatly diminished and a large proportion who might otherwise join the unfortunate and vicious classes, might be saved by the enactment and enforcement of proper local legislation.

Therefore, we most respectfully petition you for the enactment of a curfew ordinance, such as in your wisdom, you believe will accomplish the results so much desired.

And we will ever pray.

Is Disease a Crime?

Not very long ago, a popular magazine published an editorial article in which the writer asserted, in substance, that all disease should be regarded as criminal. Certain it is, that much of the sickness and suffering of mankind is due to the violation of certain of Nature's laws. But to say that all sickness should be regarded as criminal, must appeal to every reasonable individual as radically wrong.

It would be harsh, unsympathetic, cruel, yes criminal, to condemn the poor, weak, over-worked housewife who sinks under the heavy load of household cares and burdens, and suffers from weaknesses, various displacements of pelvic organs and other derangements peculiar to her sex.

Frequent bearing of children, with its exacting demands upon the system, coupled with the care, worry and labor of rearing a large family, is often the cause of weaknesses, derangements and debility which are aggravated by the many household cares, and the hard, and never-ending work which the mother is called upon to perform. Dr. Pierce, the maker of that world-famed remedy for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ills—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—says that one of the greatest obstacles to the cure of this class of maladies is the fact that the poor, over-worked housewife can not get the needed rest from her many household cares and labor to enable her to secure from the use of his "Prescription" its full benefits. It is a matter of frequent experience, he says, in his extensive practice in these cases, to meet with those in which his treatment fails by reason of the patient's inability to abstain from hard work long enough to be cured. With those suffering from prolapsus, anteversion and retroversion of the uterus or other displacement of the womanly organs, it is very necessary that, in addition to taking his "Favorite Prescription" they abstain from being very much, or for long periods, on their feet. All heavy lifting or straining of any kind should also be avoided. As much out-door air as possible, with moderate, light exercise is also very important. Let the patient observe these rules and the "Favorite Prescription" will do the rest.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound.

Explosion of 6000 Kegs of Powder at Horrell Station

ON THURSDAY MORNING

Plant Owned by the Standard Powder Company of Pittsburg—Twelve Building Destroyed

FIRE STARTED IN MOTOR HOUSE

At 5:30 Thursday morning Williamsburg and for miles around was shaken from centre to circumference by the explosions at the powder plant of the Standard Powder company, at Horrell Station located about midway between Williamsburg and Hollidaysburg, on the Petersburg branch.

The plant numbered twelve different building, and the only one escaping destruction being the powder magazine, near the railroad station.

The fire started in the motor house building by the slipping of a belt that in a short time became ignited. This occurred shortly after 11 o'clock and the flames spread to the glazer building, which contained in the neighborhood of 6,000 kegs of powder. Superintendent Taggart was away from home at the time and Mr. John Slusser was in charge of the plant.

Realizing the danger ahead and also that nothing could be done, Mr. Slusser notified the night shift of the plant and those living nearby of the probable doom of the plant in a short time. People left their homes, preferring to be out in the open air when the inevitable crash came.

In all there were four explosions three of which were both loud and destructive to property and the hillsides adjacent to the plant. Luckily no one was hurt or killed, a most remarkable thing when attending circumstances are considered.

The glazer buildings were among the first to be destroyed, having in them about 6 000 kegs of powder, as before stated, at the time of the explosion. For a time none dared to venture very close on account of the wrecked condition of the storage magazine, which contained about two carloads of dynamite and about 10,000 kegs of powder ready for shipment and the magazine and contents were deadly terrors to those knowing of its presence and the havoc it would spread in the community should it explode along with those already named.

In the immediate neighborhood of the plant there are about a dozen houses, none of which has any semblance of ever having any windows or glass in them. The awfulness of the catastrophe was felt for miles around.

A number of railroad cars were standing on the siding nearby the burning building were damaged by the force of the explosion one of which was loaded with explosives for transit to the east.

AT THE RIPE AGE OF 96.

The Mother of Dr. H. C. Holloway, of Harrisburg Dies at Her Home in Ohio.

Dr. L. M. Holloway, of Salona, received a telegram Friday morning acquainting him with the sad news that his aged mother, Mrs. J. B. Holloway had died Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. D W. Trester, at Burbank, Ohio, age d96 years. She is survived by five sons and one daughter as follows: Rev. H. C. Holloway, D. D, of Harrisburg, Pa.; C. A., of Akron, Ohio; J. B and Mrs. D. W. Trester, of Burbank, Ohio and Dr. L. M. of Salona.

Mrs. Holloway was born in Dauphin county, this state, October 3, 1810. Her childhood and maiden days were spent in that section and after marrying she moved with her husband to Centre county, where she spent her middle life and reared her family. Of later years she has lived in the locality where she died.

As might be assumed by her longevity she was a woman of sound constitution. She was a strong character and notwithstanding her extreme age she retained her mental faculties until her death, which was due to a gradual wearing out of her system. She will be buried on Sunday afternoon at Akron, Ohio.

Academy Defeated.

The "Boys on the Hill" were last night downed by the crack Wiliamsport High School Basket Ball team by the close score of 22 to 18. The game was one of the fastest ever witnessed in Bellefonte and kept the spectators continually on their feet. The teams were evenly matched, although in the first half it certainly looked like an Academy victory. In the second half Williamsport woke up and then it was that the most gruelling part of the contest took place. With two minutes more to play and the score: Academy 18, Williamsport 16, Williamsport got busy and before any one knew it. Betzel the star forward had slipped around and made three goals thereby cinching the game. It was one of the most sensational finishes that was ever played off in Bellefonte, and it surely made the Academy boys take to the woods.

The Academy this years has very fast team and baring the deficiency in covering up they certainly gave Williamsport a tussle.

Bellefonte Board of Trade Get Busy.

The National Cash Register company of Dayton, Ohio, is reported to be looking for a location in this section of the country. The industry is the largest of its kind in the world, employing 5500 men and paying in wages $5,000 000 a year. It has been a model manufactory, devoted to the comfort and improvement of its working people and the cultivation of artistic factory and home surroundings and sanitary regulations, and the town that secures it must evidently have the spirit of improvement in the same direction. Bellefonte would be an ideal location for an industry of this kind.

Don't suppose their is another colored lady in Bellefonte that is better known than Mrs. Maria Green She has gone in and out among the homes of our town and everyone always found her honest and faithful in the discharge of her duties. She is an old lady now and is fast reaching that age when she no longer can mingle among her friends as of yore. So on Friday evening, as she reached her 76th birthday, her daughter, Miss Emma held a reception at this lad es home on St. Paul street. Nearly two hundred of her friends attended and enjoyed the festivities of the occasion. Excellent refreshments were served. Guests were present from Altoona, Uniontown, Hollidaysburg and Washington, D. C. At a late hour they all departed for their homes wishing Mrs. Green many more years of health and happiness.

ONLY TWO SURVIVORS.

J. D. Parrish and John A. Blair Remain of Famous Cambria Guards.

Only two surviving members of the famous Cambria Guards are left of a long list who once answered to the roll call just sixty years ago last Wednesday, when they marched from Ebensburg to enlist their services with Uncle Sam in the conflict with Mexico. These two survivors are the venerable Joshua D. Parrish, now justice of the peace in Ebensburg, and former Sheriff John A. Blair, who is now a resident of the county capital.

Although these two men are now far advanced in age, both are able to be about and bear well the weight of their years. Mr. Parrish still maintains his office and discharges his official duties as a justice of the peace on High street Ebensburg. Mr Blair of late has grown somewhat feeble and is unable to get about with the same alacrity that characterized him up until a few years ago, but he is remarkably well preserved for a man of his age. Both gentlemen are considerably past the eightieth milestone. Note Mr. Joshua D. Parrish mentioned in the above article is the venerable father of our fellow townsman C. M. Parrish, the druggist on Allegheny street.

GOVERNOR STUART'S INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives and Fellow Citizens of Pennsylvania:

I assume the duties of the office to which I have been elected with a profound sense of the obligations that rest upon me. It is my duty, in the words of the constitution to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," and I pledge myself to a just, impartial and vigorous enforcement of them. I wish to be considered, in the conduct of all business pertaining to the commonwealth as the governor of the whole people of Pennsylvania. In my action upon every bill presented to me for my approval, I shall endeavor to be guided by those considerations which in my judgment will best promote the interests and welfare of all the people of the state.

The platform upon which I was elected promised many important reforms which the people had been demanding for years, and which, in some instances, had been persistently denied them. I gave my word to the people that if elected governor of Pennsylvania I would, to the extent of my power, insist upon the fulfillment of those promises. All of the reform pledges of that platform shall constitute a part of the policy of my administration; and, without any assumption of dictating legislative action, their early enactment into laws is urgently recommended—as urgently as words and acts can make the recommendation. The people rightfully assumed from the result of the recent election that these promised reforms would be accomplished; and it is not only my duty as the executive of the commonwealth to recommend and urge them, as I now do most earnestly, but it is the duty of the legislature, as the law making body, to see to it that by wise and effective legislation every pre-election promise made to the people be faithfully redeemed.

While we still have a large surplus in the state treasury, subject to appropriation, it is very important that great care be exercised in considering the appropriations about to be made, the institutions entirely under state control being entitled, in my judgment, to first consideration.

Care of the Insane.

Pre-eminently I desire to call attention to the condition of the hospitals for the care of the indigent insane. To my mind, the care of these unfortunates is the first duty of the state, whose wards they are. This obligation is a sacred one, and not only rests upon the ground of common humanity, but arises because it is utterly impossible for the indigent insane to receive elsewhere the treatment which they ought to have and which the state should furnish to them.

We have not kept pace in the last 10 years with the rapid increase in the number of cases of this character, and as a consequence the state institutions for the insane are much over-crowded. It is now an imperative necessity for us to take such prompt action as will enable these poor unfortunates in the various hospitals throughout the state to receive proper care. Not only should attention be given to those whose condition seems to promise ultimate restoration to health, but the hopelessly insane should have whatever care is necessary to make them comfortable.

Therefore, I most earnestly recommend that immediate consideration be given the question of providing additional accommodations, not only to relieve present conditions, but also to allow for the increase during the next few years. This can be done promptly by an early appropriation to finish the new hospital being built at Allentown, and also by appropriations for the erection of new buildings at Harrisburg, Warren, Danville and Norristown.

No subject appeals for immediate legislative action so strongly as this.

Sanitariums For Consumptives.

The advance in medical science has demonstrated nothing more conclusively than that consumption, that wide-spread infectious malady, whose ravages are most conspicuous among the families of the poor, is susceptible of being cured by special treatment and care. Our people of wealth can command relief from this terrible disease, but among the destitute and those who have had no education in the laws of health many lives are sacrificed because the patients do not possess the means to enable them to receive proper attention. Isolation and proper hygienic conditions are indispensable to curative treatment, and these may be secured by the establishment of hospitals, sanitariums and dispensaries for the afflicted who are unable to provide such relief for themselves.

Our many noble charities, which mutely but eloquently testify to the generous philanthropy of the people of Pennsylvania, can receive no more appropriate accession to their number than these institutions; and I can conceive of no monument to the cause of charity that is more worthy of the state's beneficence.

More Money For Schools.

The constitution (article X, section 1) makes it obligatory upon the general assembly to appropriate at least $1,000,000 each year for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of public schools, wherein all the children of this commonwealth above the age of 6 years may be educated. While the state has been very liberal heretofore and has appropriated more money for this purpose than any other state in the Union, yet the school appropriations for the last decade have not increased proportionately as much as those made to other departments of the state government. There is apparently a general desire to deal more generously with our public schools, and at the same time to lessen local school taxes. With our matchless progress in material wealth our state revenues must rapidly increase, and we can safely advocate the policy of making much larger appropriations to our educational system, thereby practically relieving the farms and homes of the state, as far as possible, from taxation for school purposes.

In my opinion the state gets no better return from money invested than from that which is appropriated to the maintenance of the public school system, and particularly from that portion paid to the great body of earnest men and women engaged in instructing the youth in the various educational institutions throughout the state. Therefore I most earnestly recommend such largely increased appropriations to the public schools as in the judgment of the legislature the financial condition of the state will justify.

For Better Roads.

Among the many desirable reforms which have been promised to the people, and which they are anxious to see realized, is that of the improvement of the roads and highways of the state and a more generous policy in promoting their construction. To this end more liberal appropriations have been widely discussed and generally recommended. We should go on with the good work so that every county may appreciate the benefit of it and every township profit by the example. I most heartily recommend the setting aside for this purpose of as large sums of money as the revenues of the state may from time to time permit.

I believe it would be a mistake to take the supervision of this important matter from the control of the state; for uniformity, wherever possible, is to be desired, and local indifference or waste should not be invited.

Money honestly, economically and judiciously spent on good roads is a wise investment for the state. I hope eventually to see all the important highways in Pennsylvania in such condition that they will be open to travel at all seasons of the year for those who have need to use them. At present many of the most important roads in the state are in very bad condition during several months of the winter and spring, and are the cause of great inconvenience to the travelling public.

This entire subject, to my mind, is one of vital interest and is entitled to prompt consideration by the legislature.

Trolleys Should Carry Freight.

I most earnestly recommend the enactment of legislation to confer upon trolley companies, under proper supervision and control, the right to carry freight. The early passage of a bill to this effect is most desirable. Such a law will enable the farmer to market his products more cheaply, and will enhance the value of countless farms through reduced expenses and increased facilities.

All of Pennsylvania's diversified interests are mutually dependent upon one another, and have been stimulated by the present wonderful era of industrial prosperity; but the farmer is not equally favored by these general conditions; he takes the greatest risk and too often finds the least reward. He is in every way worthy of generous treatment by the commonwealth.

A kindred subject is that of conferring upon trolley companies the power of eminent domain. Properly guarded, the exercise of such power may be highly advantageous to the public. It has its dangers, which must be carefully looked into and avoided as far as possible. If by this means it is made more practicable for future trolley lines to avoid the public highway and build over private property, a double purpose will be served. It will protect and maintain free roads for the unrestricted use of the public, while making travel on such roads safer for the driving community. This subject is submitted for the thoughtful consideration of the legislature.

Article XVII, Section 5, of the constitution of Pennsylvania provides as follows:

"No incorporated company doing the business of a common carrier shall, directly or indirectly, prosecute or engage in mining or manufacturing articles for transportation over its works; nor shall such company, directly or indirectly, engage in any other business than that of common carriers, or hold or acquire lands, freehold or leasehold, directly or indirectly, except such as shall be necessary for carrying on its business; but any mining and manufacturing company may carry the products of its mines and manufactories on its railroad or canal not exceeding 50 miles in length."

It has been charged that this article is being violated by transportation companies within the state, and I therefore recommend that such legislation as may be necessary to make it effective be given the early consideration of the legislature, in order that any violation of this law may cease.

Favors Railway Commission.

Another important question which confronts the legislature is the propriety or necessity of creating a state railway commission, to prevent discrimination or favoritism by common carriers within the state, with powers similar to those conferred upon the interstate commerce commission for the regulation of interestate transportation, or such other powers as the general assembly may designate. This tribunal would be useful in promoting needed facilities, remedying abuses, and adjudicating all state questions touching transportation.

In the preparation of legislation upon this subject care should be exercised to keep within legitimate limits. I do not believe that it is the intention or desire of the people of the state unnecessarily to harass, annoy or attempt to destroy corporations; for these have their rights under the law the same as individuals, and those rights must be respected. It should be our purpose not to attempt to destroy or tear down, but to regulate. In other words, corporations receiving rights and powers from the state should be compelled to exercise those rights and powers, not for their own benefit solely, but in the interest and for the accommodation of the public from whom they receive their charters.

Advocates Two-Cent-a-Mile Fare.

I most earnestly recommend legislation that will secure a rate not exceeding two cents per mile upon all railroads within the commonwealth, and such further legislation as will require the sale of mileage books at a rate not exceeding two cents a mile, without the requirement of a ten dollar deposit and without any other obnoxious regulation or restriction attached.

Amend Pure Food Law.

No appeal to the law making power for relief should commend itself with greater favor than that for the prohibition of the sale of adulterated food, drugs and beverages. No more serious obligation can be imposed upon public officials than devolves upon those who are entrusted with the protection of the public health by a strict enforcement of the pure food laws. An innocent violator of the law should not be made a scapegoat for the real culprit.

I, therefore recommend to the careful consideration of the legislature the advisability of such changes as will make the law protect both the people who are the consumers, and who might be imposed upon, and the retailer who unknowingly violates the law by selling the adulterated articles.

In the consideration of this question I believe it would be well to inquire whether or not it is advisable to require the manufacturers, importers and jobbers who sell such commodities to merchants in Pennsylvania to have resident agents upon whom legal service could be made, enabling the authorities to hold them responsible instead of the innocent retailers.

I also suggest the advisability of making all pure food legislation conform as nearly as possible to the federal laws upon the same subject.

This entire matter, however, is referred to the legislature for further investigation when any question touching pure food laws is being considered.

Banking Laws Need Revision.

It is the duty of the state, when a depositor puts a dollar into a depository chartered under its laws, to exert all its influence and attention to protect that dollar. I therefore recommend a thorough examination of the banking laws of the commonwealth with the of framing a new act which will more fully protect and safeguard the deposits of our people.

Such act should provide that officers and directors in financial institutions shall be held legally responsible for any of their acts in violation of law and should fix more definitely the responsibility of all persons connected with the management of such institutions, so that the people shall have the very best protection that the law can afford.

I most urgently recommend that such an act be framed to make compulsory the systematic examination, at frequent intervals, of all financial institutions chartered under the laws of Pennsylvania. If in the deliberations of the legislature it shall appear that there is not at present a sufficient number of examiners to attend to this duty, the want should be promptly supplied and authority given to appoint as many additional examiners as may be found necessary to properly perform this work.

The comparatively small additional expense attendant upon an increase in the number of examiners may be met by an addition to the amount of the payments now required from these corporations for the expenses of such examinations. Any increase in the general burden of taxation will thus be entirely avoided.

The investigation recommended may lead to an entire reorganization of the banking department. It should be carried on with judgment and discretion, and with the view of avoiding unnecessary alarm to financial institutions or unnecessary interference with them in the proper conduct of their business.

Investigate Trust Companies.

The duty of carefully investigating the condition of trust companies, chartered under the laws of this state, is a very exacting one; for not only is it necessary to ascertain whether their capital is intact, whether their loans are safe and whether the collateral securities held to protect them are of sound value, but an examination should also be made into the condition of their thousands of t[illegible] and of the other business w[illegible] ized under the la[illegible]

The best laws, h[illegible] forced, will not correct any evils that may exist; and therefore, as chief executive of the state, I will do everything within my power to maintain the banking department at as high a standard of efficiency as possible, so that it may prove beneficial to the people whose interests it is our first duty to safeguard, and so that the business of financial institutions may not be unnecessarily harassed, annoyed, or unfairly interfered with.

Recommends Civil Service Law.

I recommend the necessity of passing an adequate civil service reform law, applying to the offices of the commonwealth and to the offices of cities of the second and third classes and of the larger counties.

Should Investigate Capitol Scandal.

Previously to the dedication of the new state capitol and during the progress of a heated political contest, charges of corruption and dishonesty were made in connection with the erection and furnishing of the capitol building. The people properly became thoroughly aroused upon this question; and while the charges were a surprise to me and I knew nothing whatever about the matter, still I felt that if there was any doubt as to whether or not fraud had been committed, it could only be settled by a prompt, energetic and exhaustive investigation of all matters pertaining to the erection and furnishing of the capitol.

I now most earnestly recommend that the entire matter be investigated, and that a joint special committee of the senate and house be appointed, with the fullest powers possible to subpoena witnesses and send for books and papers, for the purpose of making a thorough examination of the entire subject.

If investigation develops that there has been any fraud committed or that the state has been wronged by any collusion, then every effort should be made to have the guilty parties indicted and punished. If it should develop that the suspected persons or any others have overcharged the state in the furnishing of supplies or materials, that payments for work have been duplicated, or that the state has been charged with and has paid for work not done, civil suits should also be commenced and the defendants compelled to make restitution.

No honest man has anything to fear from a thorough and searching investigation of the entire matter; and there is no obligation upon any official or upon any citizen of the state to protect or shield any man who may be found to be dishonest. The people will not be, and should not be expected to be, satisfied with anything but a most rigid investigation. If there has been any fraud committed, surely there is no man who will not agree with me that those who participated in or profited by such fraud should not only be met with prompt punishment but should also be compelled to make restitution.

As the governor of the state I will render to the committee all assistance in my power to make the investigation an absolutely thorough one. And in this connection I request that an appropriation be made and authority be given me to appoint special counsel and auditors, acting under the authority of the attorney general and representing the state, to appear before the committee and assist in the investigation.

It has been stated that authority was given, in connection with the furnishing of the capitol, for bills to be paid out of any unexpended balance in the state treasury. If this be true, it is a most dangerous and unwise method of appropriating public money. No expenditure should ever be made except after an itemized appropriation, based upon the estimated cost of the undertaking and naming items specifically, and under a law prohibiting any expenditure in excess of the amount stated. Any other course is in opposition to correct business principles, and contrary to that safe economic policy that should govern all expenditures of the people's money.

Promises Business-Like Administration

I will conduct my administration in a fair, business-like manner, for the welfare of the entire state; and to this end I will ever be ready to counsel and encourage all legislation looking to the progress of Pennsylvania. As necessity may arise, it shall be my pleasure to communicate with you by special message upon any important subject affecting the advancement and prosperity of our beloved state. For that reason I refrain at this time from making a longer address. It is by our actions that we are to be judged; it is by what we accomplish in the matter of betterment for the state and our people that we are to be weighed in the balance.

Prosperity Is Abroad.

It only remains for me to say that Pennsylvania has gradually but steadily gone forward. Prosperity is abroad throughout the entire state; all our manufacturing and industrial establishments are running upon full time; and all persons desiring employment are able to get it. We should do all within our power to see that this prosperity is continued, and should say to those who come from abroad to make their homes with us, "We have room for you, and if you will accept and take upon yourselves the responsibility of American citizenship, you are welcome to our state, and we shall be glad to have you with us." Our people are law-abiding; and if men from abroad come here in quest of liberty, they must be willing to accept that liberty which is regulated by law. The hand of every American citizen, whether he be such by birth or by adoption, should be raised against any man or class of men attempting to teach any other doctrine. No man or aggregation of men should be allowed to defy the law, and none are so poor or humble as not to be entitled to its protection.

COROT'S RUSTIC HABITS.

How the Artist Came to Live the Life of a Peasant.

Corot's father was a little, dry, thin old man, whose correct appearance, precise gestures and short speech were in singular contrast to the geniality and jovial ways of Camille. He was the typical business man. He wished his son to go into business and apprenticed him to a wholesale cloth merchant. Camille, who dreamed only of painting, conceived a violent aversion to commerce and seized every opportunity to escape from the shop and go up to his room to copy drawings. His employer was very dissatisfied with him and complained to his father, who reprimanded him severely. At last one day the young man did not go to business and told his father that he must follow his vocation, even if it brought him misery. Seeing that nothing could alter this decision, "Very well," the father answered. "I will give you 1,200 francs annually—not a centime more—and you will make the best you can of it."

Camille leaped for joy. He immediately made preparations for departure, left home and installed himself in the little hamlet of Morvan, at a farrier's whose numerous family was crowded into the only room, which was the forge. Corot there contracted the habits of the peasantry, which he retained ever after. He had no needs, lived only for his art and found complete happiness in it.

For a long time Corot remained at the farrier's, satisfied with the coarse food, happy in his liberty and feeling rich with his modest allowance. Endowed with robust health and being jovial by nature, he always sang while he worked, and his gayety never deserted him.

At his father's death Corot found himself possessed of a revenue of 40,000 francs, but this opulence did not change his rustic habits. He continued his simple and laborious life. Always up before dawn, he put on the peasant's clothes that he wore all his life, ate his soup, lit his pipe and with his box in his hand and his easel on his shoulder started for his work, his sonorous voice ringing out joyously.—G. Chardin in Putnam's Monthly.

A Cause For Thanks.

Charles O'Conor once began an after dinner speech in Philadelphia in this way:

"I must confess that I dread to make after dinner speeches. At the most sumptuous dinners, even at such a dinner as this one, if I know that at the end I must make a speech I am nervous, I have no appetite, I find little to admire in the best efforts of the chef. In truth, gentlemen, I can readily imagine Daniel, if he was at all of my mind, heaving a sigh of relief as the lions drew near to devour him—heaving a sigh of relief and murmuring:

"'Well, if there's any after dinner speaking to be done on this occasion, at least it won't be done by me.'"

The Saddle.

Early Greeks and Romans rode horses bareback. They regarded it as effeminate to ride in a saddle. The modern saddle, with pommel, crupper and stirrups, was unknown to the ancients. Nero gave out fancy coverings to his cavalry, and the bareback riders of the German forests used to laugh at them. Saddles with trees came into use in the fourth century, stirrups three centuries later.

ANOTHER BIG FIRE FOR BELLEFONTE.

J. Howard Lingle and Company Suffers a Loss of Nearly $10,000.

On Wednesday evening about 8 o'clock while the good people of the town were assembled in the different houses of worship attending Prayer-meetings and others listening to the sweet music the Coleville band was rendering in front of the opera house attracting the people to the Howe Moving Picture entertainment, the big whistle at the Electric light works began sounding an alarm of fire. Three short whistles told every one the fire was in South Side of the West ward. The bright light from the machine shop and foundrys was plainly seen and nearly every one in town flocked to the scene.

The fire companies lost no time in reaching the conflagation and soon had the burning buildings under control but not until the fire had destroyed in the neighborhood of $5000 to $10,000 worth of property.

It is not known just how the fire started, but it originated in the pattern shop next to the boiler house. It was noticed first by one of the night watchman. He immediately told the other two watchmen and in the mean time sent in an alarm. They have a splendid water system there and in case of fire at the works that was put in operation, and helped check the flames from spreading until the towns fire laddies reached them with their engines and other extinguishers. The wind was blowing from the north which carried the flames and sparks away from the main machine shops and foundry. The parts that were destroyed was the pattern shop, where a great many very valuable patterns were kept, some that never can be replaced, the boiler room, the large boiler was not hurt in the least, blacksmith shop and the middle section of one of the foundrys. The balance of the foundrys are all right. The largest cupalo where they draw the most material is in splendid condition, and the big orders the firm has on hand consisting of over 800 ton of castings will not be delayed a day in getting them out. The balance of the works will be in operation inside of three or four days. These shops employ nearly 200 men and is one of the best paying industries Bellefonte has and we are certainly happy to know that Mr. Lingle is not discouraged and that he will have matters all straightened out in a short time.

The loss he sustained that night was was fully covered by insurance. Most of the employee are at work this morning in the different departments and a crews of laborers are cleaning up the debris from the fire.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

The blaze that evening reminds us of the big fire that occurred about ten years ago, when one of the car shop buildings burnt down. At that time the wind was blowing towards the Blair home, destroying that house and the barn and another house along South Spring street. That night William Jennings Bryan was stirring up the people in Philipsburg with one of his famous speeches.

Several houses on Willowbank street were on fire that night but the flames were soon extinguished.

Some thing happened the Undine engine that night as it wouldn't draw water for quite a while.

Daly Justice, the fireman on the Logan engine certainly did make the "old boy" hum. Daly is a good "geak" at the engine and understands the business.

About a dozen rabbits were awakened from their quiet slumbers at the meadow near the machine shops and could be seen jumping every here and there over the field. The poor bunnies thought the world was coming to end.

Sammy Geiswhite lost all his tools that night in the fire. He valued them at $200.

The back axel on the hook and ladder truck was broken clean off when on the way to the fire that night.

Another Accident at the Quarries.

On Friday morning about eleven o'clock while some blasting was being done in the number 2 quarries of the American Lime & Stone Company, a young foreigner about 18 years old was almost killed. He had his one eye blown out his nose crushed in and other parts of his body badly cut and mangled. His name was Carmina Fornicola. He was taken to the Bellefonte hospital where his injuries were carefully attended to. A message from the hospital says he is not seriously injured.

KARLE C. TUTEN.

BENEVOLENT VERDI.

His Generosity to Old Friends and to All Aged Musicians.

The population of the little Italian village where Verdi was born was made up of uneducated, hardworking laborers, and his surroundings were of the most prosaic kind. But the fire of genius was in the lad, says his biographer, and these unsympathetic environments were powerless to extinguish it.

The honor of first drawing attention to the boy's gifts lies with a poor itinerant violinist, Bagasset by name. In his wanderings he frequently visited Le Roncole. Little Giuseppe and he struck up a friendship, and it was Bagasset who suggested to the boy's father that the lad should be allowed to follow music as a profession. In after years when Verdi had become famous he found Bagasset again, then a very old man and poor, and, remembering the past, did all in his power to help him.

When Verdi was eight years old he became the proud possessor of an old spinet. This instrument he regarded with the greatest affection, and to the day of his death it occupied a place of honor at his estate near Busseto. There was an interesting and quaint inscription written on a part of it. It gives particulars of certain repairs which had been effected and ends: "This I do gratis in consideration of the good disposition the boy Giuseppe Verdi shows in learning to play on this instrument, which quite satisfies me for any trouble. Stephen Cavaletti, A. D. 1821."

This spinet meant everything in the world to the boy at this time, and it was his enthusiasm in subjecting it to the expression of the latent music that was in him that caused the damage and necessitated the repairs referred to.

Once he was playing chords on it and was delighted at having discovered the major third and fifth of C. Trying to repeat this the following day, he was unable to find the chord again. Try as he would, he could not succeed, so in childish rage he picked up a hammer and proceeded to bang the spinet. His father came upon the scene at this moment, and, taking the part of the spinet in this unequal encounter, he gave his son a lesson which doubtless sounded chords in the boy's brain which were a revelation to him.

The benevolence of Verdi after his success was a byword, and toward those less fortunate ones of his profession his help was at all times freely given. But everything was done in the most unobstrusive way. When his old librettist Piare was stricken with paralysis Verdi paid all the costs of his illness, made him an annual allowance and at his death met the expenses of the funeral. In addition to this, he provided for the support of the old man's daughter.

One day when he was chatting with Carducci, the famous poet, an organ outside struck up an air from "Trovatore." Thinking that Verdi would be disturbed, the poet went to the window to send the man away, but the composer pushed past him and, beckoning to the organ grinder below, threw a handful of silver out, saying to his friend:

"Let him go on; it pleases me, and, besides, we must all live somehow."

The perusal of his will shows that he never forgot those who had been kind to him in his struggling days. The bequest which is most widely known in his own country is the Home of Rest For Musicians in Milan.

It had always been a great idea of Verdi's to found some institution for the care of aged musicians whose labors had not resulted in making them independent in the years when their work had come to an end. In his will he devoted a large share of his property to this scheme, and his generous gift affords a home to 100 old musicians.—Youth's Companion.

Carbonic Acid Springs.

In the Auvergne region of France a large amount of carbonic acid gas comes from the soil and is one of the last traces of the former volcanic activity of this region. The springs that yield the gas are found generally in the fissures of the ground which allow the water to rise. One of the Montpensier springs has been known as the "poisoned spring." Animals which descend into the cavity to drink are soon asphyxiated by the gas which is given off by the water and accumulates here. Bodies of birds, rabbits, dogs, sheep and other animals are found, and even persons have narrowly escaped. Vegetation is also affected by an overdose of the gas. Spots can be seen running in a line across the fields, where the plants have suffered from gas coming up through the fissures of the ground at different points. Soundings show the presence of a great quantity of gas, and it is usually in a very pure state.

A Crusher For Conkling.

Roscoe Conkling was a capital boxer and quite proud of his skill. One evening after considerable banter he induced Senator Chandler to "put on the gloves" with him. He played with Chandler for a few rounds, much to the discomfiture of the latter. Chandler bided his time and some time later quietly brought a professional pugilist to dinner where Conkling was a guest. In the course of the evening "Mr. Smith" was induced to engage in a boxing bout with Mr. Conkling. The professional danced around the senator, landing when and where he wished, playing with him as he would with a punching bag. The elegant New York senator was dazed, overwhelmed, humiliated, crushed. When he surrendered and called enough, as he did at last, Senator Chandler smiled blandly and presented the pugilist in his true colors.

Deception of Wild Birds.

Falcons—hawks, the largest species—can compress their features and look very thin if they think it necessary to do so. As to the owls, they can hump into any position they think most suitable. It is useless to look for these self preserving traits in any of the family kept in zoological collections, for the birds are so accustomed to see large numbers of people passing and repassing or standing in front of them that they treat the whole matter with perfect indifference. They know that at a certain time their food will be brought to them and that they are otherwise perfectly safe. The raptures in a wild state have a bloom on their plumage, like the bloom on a bunch of grapes, which is not so often seen when in captivity.

A Train For Tyler.

During Mr. Tyler's incumbency of the presidential office he arranged to make an excursion in some direction and sent his son Bob to arrange for a special train. It happened that the railroad superintendent was a strong Whig. As such he had no favors to bestow on the president and informed Bob that his road did not run any special trains for the president. "What!" said Bob. "Did you not furnish a special train for the funeral of President Harrison?" "Yes," said the superintendent, "and if you'll bring your father in that condition you shall have the best train on the road."

A Canton Clock.

The famous clepsydra or watch clock of Canton is housed in a temple on the city walls. Three big earthen jars on successive shelves and a fourth and lowest one with a wooden cover constitute the whole clepsydra. The water descends by slow drops from one jar to another, the brass scale on a float in the last jar telling the hours as it rises. Every afternoon at 5 o'clock since 1321 A. D. the lowest jar has been emptied, the upper one filled and the clock thus wound up for another day.

Iron In the System.

It is often said that there is iron enough in the system of an ordinary man to make a plowshare. The statement is exceedingly wide of the truth. The amount of iron contained in the animal tissues of a man weighing 150 pounds is about 100 grains, or a quarter of an ounce. Yet so important is even this small amount to the system that a difference of a few grains more or less may produce serious constitutional disturbance.

Rare Ben Jonson.

The epitaph, "O Rare Ben Jonson," engraved on the tablet marking the burial place of the celebrated playwright in the "poets' corner," Westminster abbey, is said to have originated with Jack Young (afterward knighted), who, "walking there when the grave was covering, gave the fellow 18 pence to cut it." Dr. Brewer in his "Phrase and Fable" says Shakespeare called Jonson "Rare Ben," but does not say where. According to Chambers' "Book of Days," the phrase formed the concluding words of the verses written and displayed in the clubroom of Ben's clique at the famous Mermaid tavern. The epithet "Rare Ben Jonson" is said to have been first uttered after the appearance of his highly successful farce, "Bartholomew Fair." The epitaph has been copied once at least. When Sir William Davenant was interred in Westminster abbey the inscription on his covering stone was "O Rare Sir William Davenant."

German Care of Landscapes.

Most German states have laws to prevent the disfigurement of landscapes by advertisements. The district authorities are authorized to determine what landscapes, buildings or monuments of historical or artistic value should be protected. Violations of the statute are made punishable by fine, with or without imprisonment. The statute provides against the display of pictures, advertisements or other things calculated to mar or disfigure any especially attractive landscape or detract from the artistic or aesthetic effect of any building or other structure of special importance or as highly prejudicial to any street or part of a city. The alteration of buildings of historical or artistic value may be prohibited by the local authorities, as may the construction of other buildings calculated to interfere with such historical monuments.

MAKING OLD GLORY.

The Way Flags Are Turned Out With Modern Machinery.

By the aid of modern machinery only an hour is required for the manufacture of a silk or wool bunting American flag 6 by 10 feet in size. This task includes fourteen different operations and twenty years ago required a day and a half to accomplish. The last decade has witnessed the introduction of splicing and cutting machines as well as improved sewing machines. These have revolutionized the flag making industry.

The first step in making a flag, says the New York Sun, is to cut the stripes from huge rolls of red or white silk or wool bunting. Machinery accomplishes most of this, although some operatives equipped with huge shears are still employed. The stripes are given over to the machine operatives, by whom they are sewed together with lightninglike rapidity. The lock stitch is used and the thread fed from spools, each of which holds 24,000 yards.

The strips sewed together, the flag is ready to receive the union. The union is the blue field at the left upper corner of the flag bearing the forty-six stars, a star for every state, although most of the flags seen for some months will show only forty-five stars.

Stars of wool bunting flags are of muslin, although the union itself is of the same material as the body of the flag. A star is always half the width of a stripe of the flag it adorns.

Muslin stars are cut out by machinery at the rate of 3,000 an hour. A star is five pointed, each being precisely like its fellow. As fast as the stars are cut out they are passed to girls who, standing at long tables, arrange them on the unions. Then they are basted in place by hand and turned over to the machine operatives.

Placing the union in position follows, two unions being required for each flag, one on either side. Stripes and union joined, the finishers take the flag in hand. Strong canvas bands are sewed across the headings, the bands having grommets, or eyelets, in the corners. In the case of large flags for staffs the halliards run through these grommets.

Although every year more than 4,000,000 American flags are made in the fashion described, they form only a small proportion of the total number manufactured. Millions of printed flags come into existence every year, and their number is constantly increasing.

Blaine and an Appropriation.

When James G. Blaine was speaker of the house he cleverly got through a resolution appropriating $12,000 to the needy widowed daughter of President Zachary Taylor. This lady got as far as Washington on her way to Paris to see a sick daughter and, being destitute of money, appealed to her only friend at the capital, General Sherman. His purse was always open to the distressed, but he had not funds at all adequate to relieve her necessities. In this emergency he thought of Blaine. The man from Maine entered into the spirit of the occasion as soon as he heard General Sherman's statement. He called another to the chair and made a five minutes' speech that fairly electrified the house, which passed the resolution Blaine had penned only a moment before. He took the resolution in person to the senate, where it was also immediately passed, had the president to sign it the next day, and on the following day the beneficiary got the money. General Sherman always insisted that Blaine would have made the grandest actor that ever lived and in adapting his career to politics he robbed the stage of a born star.

Horses and Furs.

"Never ship horses to New York in the fall or winter if you want to make a good sale," was the advice that was handed out to a western man who had a number of horses that he wished to dispose of at the Horse Exchange. "They'll make a better showing in the spring or summer," explained a trader on the exchange, "and impress the prospective trader with a sense of safety. It is more difficult to break in a western horse in New York ways in the winter than the summer. It really doesn't take him long to become used to the crowds and noises of the city at any time. The thing that throws him into panic is the sight of fur. In his mind furs are associated with some enemy or tormentor of the animal kingdom, and the sight and smell of fur garments arouse former fears. Some horses never do get over this weakness, and many dealers can vouch for cases in which horses that are otherwise perfectly satisfactory bring complaint from the purchaser on account of their dislike of furs."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Not One Cent For Tribute."

The copper piece with the legend, "Millions for defense, not one cent for tribute," is not a coin at all, but a medal commemorating our troubles with France during the Napoleonic wars. Resenting our Jay treaty with Great Britain, made while George Washington was president, and angry because we would not take sides in those wars, France, in 1797, began to attack our merchant ships, and we came very near becoming involved in war with her. We sent a commission over to try to arrange the trouble, and the French prime minister, Talleyrand, gave them to understand we could arrange it only by paying a bribe or making a loan to the French government. To this it was said that Charles Cotesworth Pinckney of South Carolina, a member of our commission, replied in the words uoted on the medal. This he denied, however, his reply being simply, "No, no, no; not one sixpence."—St. Louis Republic.

PEWS FOR OLD MAIDS.

Quaint Distinctions In the Old Hatfield Meeting House.

Around three sides, about on a level with the pulpit, in the old meeting house at Hatfield, Mass., extended the galleries, reached by staircases on the northeast and southeast corners, where, in the front seats, sat the singers, trebles on the north and basses on the south and counters and tenors on the east. The next two rows of seats were occupied by children, girls in the north and boys in the south, and frolicsome youngsters they were, if we may judge by the frequency with which the town was obliged to renew the brass tips to the staves of the tithing men, three of whom were always on duty to keep the youth from disorder.

Behind the children and still higher in square pews against the wall sat the young men and maidens, the latter on the north and the former on the south. One gallery pew was reserved for colored men and one for colored women, and, queerest of all, a high square pew over the north stairway was assigned to old maids and a similar pew over the south stairs to old bachelors. Just how many years these two classes had to number before they were promoted from the lower seats in the synagogue the records do not state, but that they sat in those exalted seats Samuel Dwight Partridge, to whom we are indebted for the description of the old meeting house, assures us is beyond question. The square pews on the floor were assigned to householders, according to wealth and social position.—Springfield Republican.

Why You Should Let the Photographer Do the Posing.

"I always hate to have my picture taken, because I have such a horrid long neck," said the woman petulantly as she entered the photographer's gallery.

He smiled sympathetically. "Wait till you see the picture I take," he replied. "You won't know your own neck, so to speak. No, it isn't in retouching, but I always pose a long necked subject lower than the camera, and the neck shortens up. That's only one of the tricks of the trade. The hatchet faced man I pose looking straight into the camera in a full light. His face seems to broaden and become more fleshy in this pose. The person with a fat, round face I place so that soft shadows veil either side of the face, which has a tendency to make the features more clear cut and handsome.

"I often have subjects with crooked noses. Now, a crooked nose should be frankly attacked—that is, the camera should be pointed directly at the crook, which reduces it. If I took it from the side the deformity would be exaggerated a hundredfold.

"The homeliest persons need not fear having their pictures taken if they will put themselves wholly in the photographer's hands and pose just as they are instructed to."—New York Press.

Lonely Man In a Crowd.

"Once in a great while," remarked the old New Yorker, "I have been caught out on Broadway in the theater district just as the women and girls were coming out from the matinee performances. In spite of the fact that there are always a great many men in this crowd the proportion of femininity is overwhelming, and I've been puzzled to find a satisfactory reason for my sense of confusion and embarrassment. But now I know just how I feel and why I have the emotions that always beset me so keenly there at such a time. I am simply suffering in the way a man always does who goes to an afternoon tea and finds himself the only one of his kind who has appeared on the scene."—New York Press.

TROLLEY SLEEPING CARS.

One Dollar For a Berth From Illinois Points to St. Louis.

Sleeping cars will be placed in service Dec. 1 on electric car lines between central Illinois points and St. Louis, says a special dispatch from Bloomington, Ill. The price of a berth will be a dollar.

The cars are now in the shops of the company in Bloomington, Ill., ready for regular service. They cost $25,000 each and weigh 100,000 pounds. Each car has four 150 horsepower motors. They are of handsome equipment, and each can accommodate twenty persons.

These are the first interurban sleeping cars to reach Illinois, and the experiment will be watched with interest in transportation circles.

Meadows Around the Pyramids.

A progressive Arab of Cairo is sinking wells and installing irrigation pumps at the foot of the pyramid of Cheops, and the sphinx, after gazing thousands of years on sand wastes, soon will be looking out on green fields, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. This is one of the many demonstrations of the change from the old to the new Egypt.

Philosophers and Traffic.

Many a philosopher in the course of his star gazing has fallen into a ditch—and worse. The fate of Professor Curie, the discoverer of radium, who, intent upon its possibilities, fell under the wheel of a wagon and was crushed to death, might be paralleled by several instances of the kind from lives of philosophers, notably that of Archimedes of Syracuse, who was so concentrated on a mathematical problem when its Roman besiegers at last burst into that city that he fell under their swords in spite of his impatient, "Noli turbare circulos meos!" Stepniak, too, the Russian refugee, was so engrossed with the study of nihilist questions in the course of a walk in a London suburb that he was run over and killed by a train at a level crossing.—London Chronicle.

GENTLEMEN OF THE ROAD.

The Famous "Sixteen Strings Jack" and Dick Turpin.

At the Rose tavern, a noted gaming house standing in Marylebone gardens early in the eighteenth century, Sheffield, duke of Buckingham, used to toast his companions at their farewell dinner when the season ended in the ominous words, "May as many of us as remain unhanged next spring meet here again!" John Rann, the highwayman, otherwise "Sixteen Strings Jack," of evil fame, liked to swagger about at Bagnigge Wells in the intervals of carrying out his nefarious deeds or undergoing punishment for the same. He is described as appearing there in July, 1774, "attired in a scarlet coat, tambour waistcoat, white silk stockings and a laced hat. On each knee he wore the bunch of eight ribbons which had gained him his sobriquet of 'Sixteen Strings Jack.'" There were lively doings under the influence of this sprightly gentleman, and on the occasion referred to he was pitched out of a window for offending honest company. Only a few months later he met the reward for his misdeeds on the gallows at Tyburn for venturing to rob the Princess Amelia's chaplain.

Dick Turpin was another "gentleman of the road" who amused himself in the intervals of "business" by frequenting pleasure gardens. He was once moved to kiss a fair lady in public at Marylebone, assuring her, when she protested, that she might ever after boast of the favor she had received. Whether Turpin and gentlemen of similar occupation came to pleasure gardens solely for their diversion may reasonably be doubted when we remember how frequent robberies were in the paths and field ways leading to these sylvan retreats. Watchmen were set "to guard those who go over the fields late at night," yet even so visitors were often attacked and robbed, sometimes in the gardens themselves and sometimes on the road to or from them.

In early days at Marylebone it was deemed necessary to provide the company with a guard of soldiers to conduct them home at nights, a curious winding up to a jovial evening. Pickpockets were of course plentiful at all the gardens despite every precaution, and one night at Cuper's in 1743 a thief caught in the act of taking a lady's purse was rescued from the hands of the police by a band of his comrades on his way through St. George's fields and enabled to escape justice for that time.—Temple Bar.

Lifting a Kettle of Hot Water.

Some time when the teakettle is bubbling and boiling on the kitchen range lift it quickly by its handle and set it on the open palm of your other hand. This sounds like a very foolhardy thing to do—as if your hand might be blistered in a twinkling—but you will find that you can hold the teakettle which has just come from a roaring fire for some time without hurting you. Try it and then see if you can tell the reason why you are not burned. Be sure, however, that the water is boiling strongly before you make the experiment.

A Kippered Pastor.

A French Protestant pastor was the guest of a Scottish preacher at a manse. One morning kippered herrings were served at breakfast. The French pastor asked the meaning of "kipper." His host replied that it meant "to preserve." On taking his leave next day the French pastor, wringing his host's hand, said, "May the Lord kipper you, my good friend."

Postage Stamps.

Postage stamps are peculiarly liable to become septic and to convey deadly germs, says the British Medical Press and Circular, a fact that cannot be too widely known to the public who find in it a popular substitute for sticking plaster.

Cold Affected Head and Throat —Attack was Severe.

Chas. W. Bowman, 1st Lieut. and Adjt. 4th M. S. M. Cav. Vols., writes from Lanham, Md., as follows:

"Though somewhat averse to patent medicines, and still more averse to becoming a professional affidavit man, it seems only a plain duty in the present instance to add my experience to the columns already written concerning the curative powers of Peruna.

"I have been particularly benefited by its use for colds in the head and throat. I have been able to fully cure myself of a most severe attack in forty-eight hours by its use according to directions. I use it as a preventive whenever threatened with an attack.

"Members of my family also use it for like ailments. We are recommending it to our friends."

—Chas. W. Bowman.

Don't be a Grumbler.

Don't grumble. The most unfortunate class of people living upon this green earth are the grumblers. They rob home of its joys, society of its dues and themselves of the best things of life. From the days the children of Israel "grumbled" and were sent on their tedious wanderings "for forty years in the wilderness," up to the present hour the world has been full of "grumblers." It is "too hot" or "too cold," "too wet" or too dry." People in reasonable circumstances have visions of the poor house, while the rich grumble that they can't get rich faster.

Should be Sent to Danville.

Rev. Adam Lohr, who achieved considerable notoriety about a year ago when arrested with his wife at Stahls town charged with having exterted a baneful] influence over Mr. and Mrs. Samuel James, with whom they were staying, is now said to have eloped with Mrs. Nettie Jennings, the pretty wife of a well-to-do farmer living near Greensburg, and to be living with her at Tyrone, while Mrs. Lohr is pining away at Mt. Pleasant as a deserted woman. Mrs. Jennings left two little daughters with her husband.

A Mount Pleasant woman friend, moved by the knowledge of Mrs. Lohr's deplorable condition, recently wrote a letter, in which she scored him severely for his terrible sin, only to have her breath taken away by the prompt response.

The substance of Lohr's epistle was that he was living in the seventh heaven of pleasure with the sweet creature whom God had given him; that he knew he could then do no wrong and that Mrs. Lohr's condition was no concern of his. The indignant reader then told the above story in the hope that a little publicity would perhaps cause Lohr to have another think.

Big Explosion this Morning.

The people of Bellefonte and in fact all through the county were greatly excited this morning about 5:30. A rumbling sound very much like the noise of an earthquake was heard. Over at Linden Hall and on down through Penns Valley a great many of the houses were shaken. Up in Unionville in some of the stores, canned and bottled goods tumbled from the shelves. Telephone inquiries from different parts of the county were received at this office wanting to know what was wrong. From Sunbury a party said they heard we had a big fire here last night, that it was reported that a large boiler exploded killing a number of people. The Williamsport Sun wanted to know this morning how bad the explosion was and how many people were injured.

Thank goodness nothing of the kind happened in the old town, but Williamsburg got it and from what we can learn they got it good and proper. Williamsburg is located away over in Blair county about 16 miles from Altoona. Their is a large powder mill owned by a lime stone company which is located outside the town a short distance. This morning about 5:30 it caught fire and an awful explosion occurred. No one was hurt but it is said a great many of the buildings in the little town are almost wrecked. Philipsburg Man Manager.

The Colonial Coal company, of which George Scott, of Philpsburg, is general manager, was mysteriously robbed of nearly $2,000 in cash at the Puritan workings near Portage, Saturday morning at about 10:30 o'clock.

General Manager Scott, who had arrived at the mines prior to the robbery from Portage, bore with him $2,000, which was to have been the semi-monthly pay of his employes at Puritan. As had been customary on previous pay-days, Mr. Scott delivered the cash to the engineer and fireman at the power house. These men in turn placed the treasure in the tool cupboard, the door of which was secured with a padlock. Scott and his mine foreman, William Toole, a few minutes later, went on a tour of inspection of the mines. The engineer and fireman continued their usual routine of work. Both say they were not absent from the room which contained the cupboard more than ten minutes which the robbery was discovered.

The staple to which the clasp and lock were attached had been drawn and the satchel of money confiscated. An alarm was at once given by the men to whom the satchel and money had been entrusted, but no trace of the confiscator could be found.

The engineer, Gray, and fireman. Wilson, were given the "third degree" by Scott and Toole, but neither could throw any light on the mystery. Neither had seen any interloper in the vicinity and both were positive that no person had passed into the room where the money was located.

Baffled by the clever manner in which the thief had accomplised his work Mr Scott at once set about to recover, if possible, the stolen money. He put all suspected employes under surveillance and then employed detectives to solve the mystery. Officers from this city are at work on the case.

A very pretty home wedding was celebrated at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Else, in Milesburg, Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, the contracting parties being Edith Louise Else and Claud Wilton Smith. The house was tastefully decorated in southern smilax, carnations, and potted plants, the color effect being in pink. As the strains of Lohengrins wedding march, played by Miss Jane Witter, of Tyrone, filled the house, the bridal party entered the parlor through the South door. Mr. Claud Smith and his groomsman, Mr. John M. Bullock, came first, followed by Ella A. Musser, the little flower girl, who strew the pathway of the bride with carnations. Following her came Miss Ella C. Musser, her maid of honor, and then the bride, who was dressed in white chiffon, wearing a lace handkerchief, which her mother wore as a bride. Her only ornament was a brooch, the gift of the groom. Miss Musser was gowned in a point disprit over pink taffeta, and carried pink carnations. The little flower girl looked sweet and girlish, being dressed entirely in white. During the ceremony Miss Witter played "A Dream of Heaven." Theodore Green is Insane.

The commission composed of Dr. J. L. Seibert, Newton B. Spangler, Esq., and ex-Sheriff Ishler which had been appointed by the Court to inquire as to the mental condition of Theodore Green a convicted lad from town met in the court room on Tuesday and heard testimony in regards to the young man's behaviour. From the way the fellow acted and from the testimony given it was decided that his mind was unbalanced and that he should be sent to some institution here in the state provided for such as he.

Theodore has been acting strangely of late and imagined he was worth millions of dollars. At times he became quite violent and would use fire-arms, shooting at people. When arrested he was at the gas works digging in the coal, picking out the slate imagining it was gold. An asylum is the right place for him.

MURDER AT "HELL'S HALFACRE."

Altoona is Getting as bad as New York for Crimes.

The last spark of life passed out of the body of Annie Briney yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Altoona Hospital, thus adding another murder to the police records of Altoona. Jim Ferrie, an Italian, is behind the bars at the police station charged with the murder of the Briney woman.

In a drunken brawl in the house which Bertha Campbell and her husband call home, on South Tenth avenue, near Twenty-seventh street—"Hell's Half Acre"—Friday night Ferrie pulled a revolver and from either a jealous cause or a fiendish desire to kill, shot the Briney woman, an American, who was his wife.

The shooting was kept a secret, nothing being known about the affair until 10 o'clock Saturday morning, when a patrolman made an investigation.

Six quarts of whiskey and a keg of beer furnished the method by which the jollification was enjoyed Friday night. When the whiskey and beer had been consumed Tony Patose and Bertha Campbell, who live together, went to bed. Then the shooting occurred. Ferrie than led his wife whom he had shot in the abdomen, to her home next door. There home was a squalid place. It is a miserable shanty with two rooms very little furniture, everything giving evidence of extreme poverty. A stove, bed and table practically filled up the room. Unti taken to the hospital the wounded woman lay on the bed in the kitchen. She was conscious, but moaned piteously.

Saturday morning after the police received word about the shooting Chief J. N. Tillard, with a squad of officers immediately started an investigation. They found the Briney woman in the condition described. She was hurried to the hospital, but the wound was too serious and death ensued after forty-two hours of suffering.

Ferrie stayed about the house until the police arrived and then disappeared going westward along the railrood.

Officers were started on his trail and Patrolmen Demattis and Spangler traced him to Baker's station where he was arrested at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

The murdered woman is an American being a daughter of Mrs. Rowles to a former husband. She was 24 years old and had been a resident of this city all her life. Her name before marriage to the Italian was Annie Briney. She has one brother, Michael Briney. The mother stated that her daughter married the Italian against her wishes and that he frequently abused her, so that she is not at all surprised at the outcome of events She said he was alright when sober, but he frequently became intoxicated, when he would abuse her and threaten to kill her.

A representative of a large and valuable estate in Sweden that is to be settled upon as soon as the main heir is found was in Bellefonte searching for the missing man, supposed to have been here at one time, although no record could be obtained of him. His name is Alfred Robert Axelsson, although in Sweden his last name was Cronpfeim.

LOVE CHARMS.

Some of the Queer Superstitions That Live In Sicily.

The love charms of Sicily are many and curious. One, very popular and considered very powerful, is to put into an eggshell a few drops of the blood of the longing lover. The shell is exposed to the sun for three days and to the dew for three nights. It is then placed on hot ashes until calcined, when the whole is reduced to a fine powder and administered secretly in a cup of coffee or a glass of wine to the object of affection.

Another charm is for the witch to undress at midnight and tie her clothes up in a bundle which she places on her head. Then, kneeling in the center of her room, she pronounces an incantation, at the end of which she shakes her head. If the bundle falls in front of her, it is a good sign; should it fall behind her, the charm will not avail.

Yet another is worked in the following manner: Pieces of green, red and white ribbon are purchased in three different shops, the name of the persons to be charmed being repeated mentally each time. The shopkeeper must be paid with the left hand, the ribbon being received in the right. When all the pieces are bought they are taken to a witch, who sets out to find the person to be charmed. On finding him or her the witch mutters to herself, "With these ribbons I bind you to such a one." Then she returns the ribbons to the purchaser, who ties them beneath his or her left knee and wears them at church.—Macmillan's.

DIED A BEGGAR.

The Pathetic Career of John Stow, the English Antiquary.

John Stow, the celebrated English antiquary, was a remarkable man. He was born of poor parents about 1525 and brought up to the tailor's trade. For forty years his life was passed among needles and thread, but in the few leisure hours which his trade allowed him he had always been a fond reader of legends, chronicles, histories and all that told of the times that were past. By such reading he grew to be so attached to old memoirs that when about forty years of age he threw down his needle, devoted himself to collecting them and followed his new profession with the faith and enthusiasm of an apostle. Short of means, he made long journeys afoot to hunt over and ransack colleges and monasteries, and, no matter how worn and torn might be the rags of old papers which he found, he kept all, reviewing, connecting, copying, comparing, annotating, with truly wonderful ability and good sense. Arrived at fourscore years and no longer capable of earning a livelihood, he applied to the king, and James I., consenting to his petition, granted to the man who had saved treasures of memoirs for English history the favor of wearing a beggar's garb and asking alms at church doors. In this abject state, forgotten and despised, he died two years later.

From the Bountiful East.

A small proportion of the flora is indigenous. The majority came from the east, like all the great ideas on which our culture is founded, and were developed and improved on this classic soil. Italy received the lemon and the orange from the Semites, who in their turn had obtained them from India. The olive, the fig, the vine and the palm were grown by the Semites long before their cultivation penetrated to the west. The laurel and myrtle, indeed, are indigenous in Italy, but their use for ceremonial purposes came across the Mediterranean from the east. The home of the cypress is not in Italy, but in the Greek archipelago, northern Persia, Cilicia and Lebanon.—From Strasburger's "Riviera."

The Difference.

Small Boy—Pa, what is the difference between a pessimist and an optimist?

Pa—Well, let me see if I can illustrate. You know I am often discouraged, and things don't look to me as if they'd ever go right. Well, at such times I can be said to be a pessimist. But years ago, when I was a young man, everything looked bright and rosy, and I was always hopeful. Then I was an optimist. Now, my son, can you understand the difference between a pessimist and an optimist? Small Boy—Oh, yes; one is married and the other isn't.—Harper's Weekly.

Cause of His Joy.

"What are you looking so happy over, old man?"

"I am rejoicing over the birth of twins."

"Great Scott! I congratulate you!"

"Don't congratulate me. Go and congratulate Evans. He's the lucky man. I never did like him."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Stole His Livelihood.

Tattered Timothy—I hate doctors.

Trespass Thomas—What fur? Tattered Tim—One of 'em cured me o' fits w'en I wuz a kid. Gee, I cud work up some sympathetic crowds if I c'd have one right now!—Cleveland Leader.

Alabaster Ornaments.

The best method of cleaning any alabaster ornament is to first remove any grease with spirits of turpentine and then to place the article in water for ten minutes or a little longer if very dirty. Next rub all over with a paint-er's brush and leave to dry. Then rub again with a soft brush dipped in plaster of paris.

GENTLEMEN OF THE ROAD.

The Famous "Sixteen Strings Jack" and Dick Turpin.

At the Rose tavern, a noted gaming house standing in Marylebone gardens early in the eighteenth century, Sheffield, duke of Buckingham, used to toast his companions at their farewell dinner when the season ended in the ominous words, "May as many of us as remain unhanged next spring meet here again!" John Rann, the highwayman, otherwise "Sixteen Strings Jack," of evil fame, liked to swagger about at Bagnigge Wells in the intervals of carrying out his nefarious deeds or undergoing punishment for the same. He is described as appearing there in July, 1774, "attired in a scarlet coat, tambour waistcoat, white silk stockings and a laced hat. On each knee he wore the bunch of eight ribbons which had gained him his sobriquet of 'Sixteen Strings Jack.'" There were lively doings under the influence of this sprightly gentleman, and on the occasion referred to he was pitched out of a window for offending honest company. Only a few months later he met the reward for his misdeeds on the gallows at Tyburn for venturing to rob the Princess Amelia's chaplain.

Dick Turpin was another "gentleman of the road" who amused himself in the intervals of "business" by frequenting pleasure gardens. He was once moved to kiss a fair lady in public at Marylebone, assuring her, when she protested, that she might ever after boast of the favor she had received. Whether Turpin and gentlemen of similar occupation came to pleasure gardens solely for their diversion may reasonably be doubted when we remember how frequent robberies were in the paths and field ways leading to these sylvan retreats. Watchmen were set "to guard those who go over the fields late at night," yet even so visitors were often attacked and robbed, sometimes in the gardens themselves and sometimes on the road to or from them.

In early days at Marylebone it was deemed necessary to provide the company with a guard of soldiers to conduct them home at nights, a curious winding up to a jovial evening. Pickpockets were of course plentiful at all the gardens despite every precaution, and one night at Cuper's in 1743 a thief caught in the act of taking a lady's purse was rescued from the hands of the police by a band of his comrades on his way through St. George's fields and enabled to escape justice for that time.—Temple Bar.

He Never Hove "Gampy."

Micah Jarrett was a shrewd horse trader to the day of his death. He was slightly deaf and used his deafness in his business to no small degree.

One day he sold an old horse to a neighboring farmer, who thought he had found a great bargain. He changed his mind, however, when, after driving his new purchase a few miles, the beast emitted a series of explosions strongly resembling the exhaust of a locomotive.

Straightway he drove to "Gampy," who was sharpening a knife in his dooryard, his son Abner turning the grindstone. The disgruntled purchaser began a long tirade, which was perfectly audible to the old man, who, however, simulated great deafness and finally remarked, "Hey?"

"You're a skin!" howled his neighbor.

"Hey?"

"I say you're a skin. This hoss 'as got the heaves."

"Hey?"

"He's got the heaves. Heaves—heaves—heaves!"

The old man looked at him calmly. Then, indicating his son, he said gently: "Never hove me. Hove Abner once."—Boston Herald

DAWN OF A NEW RELIGION.

No Throne Above, No Beyond, Says Professor Schmidt of Cornell.

Professor Nathaniel Schmidt of the Cornell department of Semitic languages and oriental history preached in the Unitarian church at Ithaca the other morning, says the New York World.

The speaker declared that a new religion was approaching, in which is a deeper insight into nature and a deepening of the moral sense. Christianity has failed to adapt itself to the spiritual needs of man, he said. The new religion will meet all these. It will be universal, covering all times and peoples.

The supernatural in religion is foolishness, he declared. There is no throne above in the new faith, and the idea of a beyond can have no place. We are all denizens of the universe. The mind must progress. Away with formulas and creeds! Put them into a museum, as a thing to be studied.

Pleasant.

"Oh, George, I'm so glad you've come!" exclaimed the girl. "Father is so excited and disturbed. Do go in and calm him."

"Very well," replied George, "what's the matter with him?"

"Why—er—I just told him you wanted to marry me."

To willful men the injuries that they themselves procure must be their schooling.—Shakespeare.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

PLENTY OF CHALK.

A Block That Was Once as Large as the Continent of Europe.

The small piece of chalk which is in constant use in the schoolroom, the lecture room, the billiard room and the workshop has a strange history, the unraveling of which through all its complexities is one of the most difficult problems with which the science of the present day is called upon to deal. This piece is in reality a chip of an immense block of chalk that once filled an area the size of the continent of Europe and of which even yet several gigantic fragments remain, each hundreds of square miles in extent. These patches are scattered over the region lying between Ireland on the west and China on the east and extend in the other direction from Sweden in the north to Portugal in the south.

In the British isles the chalk is found in greatest perfection and continuity in the east and southeast of England. A sheet of chalk more than a thousand feet in thickness underlies all that portion of England which is situated to the southeast of a line crossing the island diagonally from the North sea at Flamborough head to the coast on the English channel in Dorset. This enormous sheet of chalk is tilted up slightly on the west, and its depressed eastern portions that dip toward the waters of the North sea are usually buried from sight by means of overlying sands and clays. Where the edges of the chalk floor come upon the sea the cliff scenery is strikingly grand and beautiful. Any one who has once seen the magnificent rocks of Flamborough and Beachy head, the jagged stacks of the Needles or the dizzy mass of Shakespeare's cliff, near Dover, can understand why "the white cliffs of Albion" has grown into a stock phrase.

This massive sheet of chalk appears again in France, in many parts of Europe as far east as the Crimea and even in central Asia beyond the sea of Aral. How far it stretched westward into what is now the Atlantic may never be known, but chalk cliffs of at least 200 feet in thickness are seen at Antrim, in Ireland, and less conspicuous formations are found in Scotland, in Argyll and Aberdeen. There can be little question that all these now isolated patches were once connected in a continuous sheet, which must therefore have occupied a superficial area about 3,000 miles long by nearly 1,000 broad, an extent larger than that of the present continent of Europe.

Skirts For Men.

Bell skirted overcoats are the latest novelty in the tailoring world, says the London Mirror. They have been introduced by tailors of High Holborn, in London, and already there is quite a boom in the article. The effect of the new overcoat is graceful if somewhat feminine. The cloth is taken in at the waist, then allowed to hang loose, falling in natural folds, like a lady's skirt. "Quiet colors are best for such a novel style," said one of the sartorial artists the other day. "Green checks or stripes, which can be worn with impunity for a less attractive style of coat, would look ridiculous."

Standing and Sitting.

David Slowpay—I shall bring you back those dark trousers to be reseated, Mr. Snip. You know I sit a good deal. Mr. Snip (tailor)—All right, and if you'll bring the bill I sent you six months ago I will be pleased to receipt that also. You know I've stood a good deal.—London Tit-Bits.

Properly Situated.

"They may say what they like against him," said the convicted one's defender, "but his heart is in the right place."

"Yes," assented the other, "and so is the rest of him for a few years."

His Stubbornness.

"Haven't you and your friend got through that argument yet?" asked a parent of his youngest son.

"It isn't any argument," answered the boy. "I am merely telling Jimmie the facts in the case, and he is so beastly stubborn that he won't understand."—Chums.

PEWS FOR OLD MAIDS.

Quaint Distinctions In the Old Hatfield Meeting House.

Around three sides, about on a level with the pulpit, in the old meeting house at Hatfield, Mass., extended the galleries, reached by staircases on the northeast and southeast corners, where, in the front seats, sat the singers, trebles on the north and basses on the south and counters and tenors on the east. The next two rows of seats were occupied by children, girls in the north and boys in the south, and frolicsome youngsters they were, if we may judge by the frequency with which the town was obliged to renew the brass tips to the staves of the tithing men, three of whom were always on duty to keep the youth from disorder.

Behind the children and still higher in square pews against the wall sat the young men and maidens, the latter on the north and the former on the south. One gallery pew was reserved for colored men and one for colored women, and, queerest of all, a high square pew over the north stairway was assigned to old maids and a similar pew over the south stairs to old bachelors. Just how many years these two classes had to number before they were promoted from the lower seats in the synagogue the records do not state, but that they sat in those exalted seats Samuel Dwight Partridge, to whom we are indebted for the description of the old meeting house, assures us is beyond question. The square pews on the floor were assigned to householders, according to wealth and social position.—Springfield Republican.

Why You Should Let the Photographer Do the Posing.

"I always hate to have my picture taken, because I have such a horrid long neck," said the woman petulantly as she entered the photographer's gallery.

He smiled sympathetically. "Wait till you see the picture I take," he replied. "You won't know your own neck, so to speak. No, it isn't in retouching, but I always pose a long necked subject lower than the camera, and the neck shortens up. That's only one of the tricks of the trade. The hatchet faced man I pose looking straight into the camera in a full light. His face seems to broaden and become more fleshy in this pose. The person with a fat, round face, I place so that soft shadows veil either side of the face, which has a tendency to make the features more clear cut and handsome.

"I often have subjects with crooked noses. Now, a crooked nose should be frankly attacked—that is, the camera should be pointed directly at the crook, which reduces it. If I took it from the side the deformity would be exaggerated a hundredfold.

"The homeliest persons need not fear having their pictures taken if they will put themselves wholly in the photographer's hands and pose just as they are instructed to."—New York Press.

Lonely Man In a Crowd.

"Once in a great while," remarked the old New Yorker, "I have been caught out on Broadway in the theater district just as the women and girls were coming out from the matinee performances. In spite of the fact that there are always a great many men in this crowd the proportion of femininity is overwhelming, and I've been puzzled to find a satisfactory reason for my sense of confusion and embarrassment. But now I know just how I feel and why I have the emotions that always beset me so keenly there at such a time. I am simply suffering in the way a man always does who goes to an afternoon tea and finds himself the only one of his kind who has appeared on the scene."—New York Press.

Her Head Was Hot.

Lady Dorothy Nevill in her reminiscences tells this story of the two Misses Walpole, her cousins: "On one occasion, when both of the two were well over ninety, Miss Fanny, the younger, who had that day been rather ill, only joined her sister in the sitting room just before dinner. On her arrival downstairs the latter (Miss Charlotte by name) remarked: 'Fanny, I am going to be ill too. I feel so hot about the head. It must be apoplexy.' 'Nothing of the sort!' exclaimed Miss Fanny, making a dash at her sister's head. 'Your cap's on fire, and I'm going to put it out.' And so the brave old thing did."

The First Dancers.

People have danced for thousands of years and will probably continue to do so for ages to come. This custom is of ancient origin. The first people to dance were the Curetes, who adopted dancing as a mark of rejoicing in 1543 B. C. In early times the Greeks combined dancing with the drama, and in 22 B. C. pantomimic dances were introduced on the Roman stage. At the discovery of America the American Indians were holding their religious, martial and social dances.

Daily Duties.

The best part of one's life is the performance of one's daily duties. All higher motives, ideas, conceptions and sentiments in a man's life are of little value if they do not strengthen him for the better discharge of the duties which devolve upon him in the ordinary affairs of life.

Gen. Superintendent.

Thackeray's Apology.

Thackeray once wrote in a note to a friend, alluding to an incident occasioned by one of his articles in Punch: "I thought over the confounded matter in the railroad and wrote instantly on arriving here a letter of contrition and apology to Henry Taylor for having made what I see now was a flippant and offensive allusion to Mrs. Taylor. I am glad I have done it. I am glad that so many people whom I have been thinking bigoted and unfair and unjust toward me have been right and that I have been wrong, and my mind is an immense deal easier."

There's a story of a farmer and his son driving a load to market. Of the team they were driving one was a steady reliable old gray mare the other a fractious balky black horse. On the way the wagon was stalled and and the black horse sulked and refused to pull. „What'll we do father?" said the younger man. "Well" said the father "I guess we'll have to lay the gad on the old gray.' That homely compliment to women: "The gray mare's the better horse" suggests how often when there's an extra strain to be borne it is laid on the woman's back. How often she breaks down at last under the added weight of some "last straw." Women who are dragging along wearily through life can gain real strength by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It puts back in concentrated form the strength making material which working women use up more rapidly than it can be restored by Nature in the ordinary processes of nourishment and rest. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are universal favorites with women because they are easy to take and thoroughly effective in curing the consequences constipation.

Mrs. Nancy Davis, of 246 East Logan Street, says: "I suffered a bad fall some years ago when living in Rochester. I thought at first that I had broken my back. I was unable to get up without assistance and from that time I suffered for years with a weak back and excruciating pains through the loins and through the small of my back. Sometimes I was completely prostrated and helpless. Doctors and medicines failed to help me and the pain continued until I got Doan's Kidney Pills. I took only a few doses before I began to feel better and when I had continued using them for a while I was thoroughly cured. My back regained its strength and the pain left me. I have had no return of the trouble since."

"THE JEW PEDDLER."

A Shrewd Piece of Old Sleuth's Work at Snow Shoe

"Any suspenders, stockings, collar buttons, pants buttons, selling them cheap and will give you a bargain today," is the way the Jew peddler introduced himself at Clarence on the 22nd day of last November, at George Kachic's hotel. He was asked what he wanted and where he was going, he said he would like to engage boarding there for the day as he expected to do some selling in that neighborhood. The fellow was a typical Jew peddler with a bright red knapsack fastened with a strap. He got his dinner went out and sold a good many articles, went to Andrew Kachic's home became acquainted and became friends as the peddler understood the Slavish language and conversed with him freely and drank cheerfully. He told his country folks around there that the Jew was a friend and a native of his country in this way he became thoroughly acquainted. He sang their songs and played their music, eat their bread and drank their beer. They confided in him their secrets and when he insisted on leaving he was told to stay and it would cost him nothing. Young Kachic even took him out to call on his lady friend who nearly fell in love with him. With all these kindness bestowed upon him he still continued selling his suspenders and collar buttons, etc. Not many days passed around until he was just the least bit suspicioned and when told about the matter he laughed them into confidence again telling them that he must remain a while with them because of his health and that the only way for him to defray his expences was to sell these articles. He told them his parents were rich and that he had rich relatives in this country, which was believed. They treated him kinder than ever, bought him pretty presents such as neckties, rings, cuff buttons, etc. "The web was being wound closeer"

Later on he received a letter from his cousin in which he was to look for a good location for a general store. The Jew immediately selected a building, owned by Mr. Kachic where a priest lived. It was an old house with three acres of land, he wrote for his cousin to come and the two made a deal with Kachic. They came to Bellefonte with Mr. Kachic and drew up a deed, and some little trouble interrupted the paying of the money that day so they all went back to Snow Shoe Time passed on and in the mean time plans were drawn up for an erection of a large store, 70 feet wide and 100 feet long. They engaged the clerks and let on to be buying their goods. One prominent merchant went to Mr. Kachic and offered them $500 if they would not sell or close the contract. They noticed Andrew Kachic was not quite so friendly as he was at first and in fact seemed to know just about what was going to be done. The Jews had completed their work, and sold their goods and on Friday after Christmas they came back to Bellefonte. They were followed to town by Kachic with the deed who asked them to close the contract for the sale. He was told that the one was going to Philadelphia to secure the money and would be back in a few days and that the other was going to Pittsburn to purchase the material to build with and goods for the store.

This pleased Mr. Kachic and he went back to Snow Shoe satisfied.

The "Jew Peddler" turned out to be a shrewd detective, who carried out his work to perfection. He was nearly caught several times, but his wonderful ability always helped him out. He secured the best of testimony and reported the same to the cheif.

W. Weiss known through the Snow Shoe region as "John Decker the Jew Peddler" is the sleuth who raveled out the mystery of this murder and caused the arrests of the two men now in jail, who are accused of the crime. He was ably assisted by Nathan Weissbecker.

A. L. Millard. cheif of the Standard Detective Bureau and Harry Barnes went to Snow Shoe on Friday of last week and placed these men under arrest.

A hearing was given them at Snow Shoe and Weiss (or Decker) secured a number of witnesses who claim they heard Kachic make threats against his cousin's life. Weiss acted as an interperter and translated the Savish language into the English.

He is a Hebrew and was born in Austria, Hungary. While in his native land he was employed as a detective. He has been in this country five years. So endeth the little story as how a "Jew Peddler" wound the web and caused the arrest of Watson and Kachic

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. PHILIP B. CRIDER PASSES AWAY.

Died at his home on Linn st Thursday Morning at 10:20

Thursday morning at 10.20 the angel of death entered the Crider home on Linn street and called away the life of Philip B. Crider to that land whence no traveler returneth. Mr. Crider has been ailing health for the past year and his death though sudden was not unexpected by his many friends, nevertheless it was a shock to those who are near and dear to him. Mr. Crider had reached his 85th year on Wednesday.

Philip B. Crider was born at the mouth of Young Woman's Creek, of Clinton Co. January 9, 1822, that country being then new, and his parents poor, he had very meager school privileges, and early in life started to be self supporting He learned the business of manufacturing woolen goods in the employ of John Rich and John Hillard at their factory in the western part of the town of Pine Creek, Clinton county, and remained with these gentlemen some thirteen years.

He then purchased the old homestead, where he farmed for several years when he became identified with the lumbering interests of Centre Co., operating first between the Moshannon Creeks, where he was engaged with Samuel Crist, of Lock Haven, then the most extensive lumber operator in the country, owning upward of fourteen thousand acres of good pine timber lands. He was so occupied several years, when he began manufacturing lumber for the Snow Shoe Railroad Co. Following this, Mr. Christ and himself purchased the stock of the firm of Holmes and Wigton, and the new firm carried on extensive operations in the same line for a period of years. Mr Crider was next associated with General Beaver, Edward Humes and others of Bellefonte, who had formed a company and controlled several thousand acres of timber land in Clearfield Co. where he met with a severe accident, receiving a bad cut in one of his limbs by an awkward workman, from which he was disabled for two or three years. This led him to make a change in his affairs, resulting in an exchange of business interests between he and Mr. Christ, which subsequently took him to Snow Shoe, where for many years he and his son, F. W. Crider, were extensive lumber operators, also having mills and yards in other localities.

Some seventeen years ago they made the borough of Bellefonte their headquarters and principal point of operations. Their plant which is located at the corner of Race and Lamb streets, together with mills in the woods, is one of the largest and best equipped in this section of Pennsylvania. The planing mills, lumber shedding and other necessary buildings in all cover an area of five acres, while in the various departments of the business from 50 to 100 hands are employed, and the proprietors have with characteristic enterpize availed themselves of every late and meritorious device in the way of machinery and appliances calculated to insure rapid and perfect production.

The deceased has been a most successful business man. Possessed of good common sense, accompanied with business tact, and that energy that is characteristic of his German lineage, he has overcome obstacles and gradually forged steadily to the front until he occupied an envious position in business circles. His entire business career has been one of uprightness. Fair in all his dealings with his fellow men, and of the strictest entegrity. He was an esteemed citizen of Bellefonte. and a man of considerable means, of retiring disposition modest and unassuming.

In 1844 the deceased was married to Catherine Miller, a daughter of John Miller, of Clinton county, Pa., a lady of uncompromising entegrity, from the Crider neighborhood, on Chatam Run. To this union were born three children, namely. Fountain W., of Bellefonte; IsaacS and Josephine H., now deceased.

The funeral services was held at the Crider home Saturday at 10 a. m. conducted by Rev. James B. Stine, of the Methodist Episcopal church. The body was taken on the 1.23 train to Lock Haven for interment.

The Spirit of Winter.

The Spirit of Winter is with us, making its presence known in many different ways—sometimes by cheery sunshine and glistening snows, and sometimes by driving winds and blinding storms. To many people it seems to take a delight in making bad things worse, for rheumatism twists harder, twinges sharper, catarrh becomes more annoying, and the many symptoms of scrofula are developed and aggravated. There is not much poetry in this, but there is truth, and it is a wonder that more people don't get rid of these ailments. The medicine that cures them—Hood's Sarsaparilla—is easily obtained and there is abundant proof that its cures are radical and permanent.

FAMOUS GAMBLERS.

Old Time London Betting Clubs and Their Members.

There were three principal clubs—White's, Brookes' and Boodles'. White's was originally a "chocolate house" in William III.'s time, but became a private club early in the eighteenth century and was used by the Tories. It was a club always noted for high play and betting, and very curious some of their bets were, the old wager book being still preserved. Brookes' was the Whig club and was then conducted by that

Liberal Brookes, whose speculative skill
Is hasty credit and a distant bill;
Who, nursed in clubs, disdained a vulgar trade,
Exults to trust and blushes to be paid.

Among the members of this club were the Prince of Wales, and, of course, his fidus Achates, Sheridan, besides the great Charles James Fox, who here played deeply and whose name is oft recorded in the wager book, which, however, is of older date and was kept when the club was held at Almack's. "Lord Northington bets Mr. C. Fox, June 4, 1774, that he (Mr. C. F.) is not called to the bar before this day four years." "March 11, 1775, Lord Bolingbroke gives a guinea to Mr. Charles Fox and is to receive a thousand from him whenever the debt of this county amounts to £171,000,000. Mr. Fox is not to pay the £1,000 till he is one of his majesty's cabinet." "April 7, 1791, Mr. Sheridan bets Lord Lauderdale and Lord Thanet 25 guineas each that parliament will not consent to any more lotteries after the present one voted to be drawn in February next."—From "The Dawn of the Nineteenth Century," by John Ashton.

HE DIED FIGHTING.

How Prince Louis Napoleon Was Killed by the Zulus.

How Prince Louis Napoleon was killed by the Zulus June 1, 1879, is told graphically in the book by Sir Evelyn Wood, who took part in that war. The little party which the prince accompanied was surprised and attacked. Sir Evelyn writes: "The Zulus in pursuit ran first after the two white soldiers who were on the flanks, three or four men, headed by Labanga, following the prince. His horse had jumped just as he was mounting, and his sword fell out of its scabbard. He was very active and was vaulting on his horse in motion when the wallet on the front of the saddle broke away, and he fell to the ground, being at this time only sixty yards behind the (British) fugitives. There were seven men who actually fought the prince. When Langalebele, pursuing the fugitives, first saw Labanga, he was running away from the prince, who was rushing at him. Labanga, crouching in the grass, threw an assagai at him. The first assagai stuck in the prince's thigh, and, withdrawing it from the wound, he kept his foes at bay for some minutes. In the native's words: 'He fought like a lion. He fired two shots, but without effect, and I threw an assagai at him, which struck him, as I said at the time, but I always allowed Labanga's claim to have killed him, for his assagai hit the prince in the left shoulder, a mortal wound.'"

Some Odd Wills.

One of the oddest documents of the will kind known was that of Queen Austrigilda, consort of King Goutram of Burgundy. The dying princess enjoined upon her husband to slay and bury in the same grave with her the physicians who had attended her. Another will was that of a husband who forbade his wife's marrying on pain of his returning to haunt her. This is quite different from that of a woman who instructed her executors to seek out "some nice, good, pretty girl" who would make an affectionate second wife to her spouse. It is a fact interesting in this connection that the first Napoleon actually bequeathed 10,000 francs to a fellow named Cantillon, who had been tried for attempting the assassination of the Duke of Wellington.

Pope's Skull.

The skull of Alexander Pope, the poet and satirist, is in the private collection of a phrenologist. During some alterations in the churchyard where Pope was buried it was necessary to move his coffin, which was opened at the time to ascertain the state of his remains. By bribing the sexton of the church possession of the poet's skull was obtained for the night, and in the morning a different skull was returned instead. The cost of the skull, including the bribe, was £50.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as readily as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend
